LrSuperKeys Crack

Lightroom users who rely heavily on the Development module and its subsequent, available adjustment methods, know that an efficient workflow depends on the used hotkeys, their accessibility, and overall ergonomics. Designed specifically in order to address the issues of slider adjustments in Lightroom, LrSuperKeys offers users a tool that will help them increase their image processing efficiency, through several, purpose-fit functions. In order to achieve a better image editing workflow, the plugin allows one to perform the slider adjustments without having to actually access the sliders in the regular sense. Basically, through a series of programmable keys, which work in conjuncture with the mouse buttons and wheel, users will be able to perform the adjustments by simply running the keys and mouse gestures, directly onto the image, or other areas of the screen. Furthermore, the programmable functions library accepts a wide range of keys, each for a different parameter, such as image rotation, temperature, tint, shadows, saturation, etc. Used together with the mouse, these keys provide a finer adjustment degree, since the actual sliding area is larger. Additionally, the plugin also offers a dedicated menu, which enables users to store several of their favorite adjustments and have them readily accessible at the click of a button, in a floating menu. LrSuperKeys Screenshot: Installation: Download the zip file and unzip it to your system's plugins folder. You can find it in Lightroom's "Add-Ons" window. If you don't know what your plugins folder is, or it doesn't appear in the window, press the "Help" button and look for a program called "Get Info". Lightroom 2.5 Keyboard shortcuts: There are several, available keyboard shortcuts for the adjustments in LrSuperKeys. If you are familiar with Lightroom, you can find the list of the shortcuts in the Lightroom's Preferences (Lr Preferences) window. Activating a key command: Use the "1" key to activate the first key command. Use "2" to activate the second key command, and so on. To deactivate a key command, use the "9" key. Working with the mouse: It is possible to activate a key command without the use of the mouse. Instead, simply press the corresponding key in the list on the right side of the screen, without moving the mouse.

What's New in the LrSuperKeys?

For the User: Specially designed for and created with Lightroom users in mind, this plugin offers a series of keys that work in a manner that allows users to adjust their images without having to access the standard sliders of Lightroom. In order to make the use of these sliders as intuitive as possible, users will be able to adjust their images, even on the fly. Through a collection of preset keys, users can adjust their images in a matter of seconds, or, if needed, even do a thorough image manipulation from the keyboard. Moreover, several of the adjustment keys can be stored in a floating menu that will make it easier to access the different features, at any given time. For the Developer: LrSuperKeys is entirely plug-in independent, meaning that it will work with any plug-in that supports the HIDE/SHOW API. Also, users do not have to compile or purchase the plugin, since it is distributed for free under the Creative Commons license. Designed for a specific group of users, LrSuperKeys works well with all Lightroom versions (4 through 6), along with the following versions of Lightroom: Photoshop CS3 and above, as well as Photoshop Elements 7 and above. Additionally, the plugin has been tested to work with Adobe Bridge, Adobe Photoshop CS4 and Lightroom 4. Programmable Keys: The key functions offered by this plugin are designed to allow users to perform several Lightroom specific adjustments, like a faster and smoother image processing and editing workflow. The keys are programmable, and enable users to set their own preferences for their own images. In order to do so, users must simply adjust the keys to their liking. For starters, users may adjust all the sliders in Lightroom, as usual, but in this case, the adjustments will only apply to the image that is currently selected in Lightroom. Moreover, the Adjustment Key menu also enables users to store several keys that will apply to the currently active image. These keys will automatically appear in a floating menu that users can access at any given time by pressing the TAB key. Other Key functions: Besides being a tool that enables users to perform adjustments on the fly, LrSuperKeys also enables users to apply several adjustments, with a much greater degree of precision, due to the larger area that the adjustments are made over. With the same mouse movement, users can perform the image adjustment over a much larger area, which, in turn, will provide users with a better control over their adjustments. Additionally, LrSuperKeys is able to accept a wide range of key commands, like a tilt, rotate, flip, zoom, clone, move, paste, delete, etc., along with the cursor movement, as defined by the developer.
